

To Whom it may concern,

I would like to say that in the past several months that I have had occasion to work with Casey on my huge decision to "sell or not to sell" and move. I have never found him to be anxious to get my house and make a sale. Quite the opposite. He has advocated on more than one occasion that I am well off where I am, and might not improve my status by going through the trauma of a move. At the same time, i was never brushed off, but always welcomed with whatever new ideas I came up with, even when they were not that practical or workable. I have come to think of him as a good councillor and caring friend, very different from so many others out there who just want to make their sale and move on to the next target.

I have been impressed by the ever increasing knowledge he displays, i.e. always learning and growing in his profession. This along with his caring attitude definitely separates him from the pack today, and reminds me of a Realtor we used to take for granted in years past.

I can highly recommend him to anyone embarking on this difficult and potentially dangerous task of buying and selling a house.
